▲下篇短文共有 4 個空格，爲第 21-24 題，請依短文文意，選出一個最適合該空格的答案。

Our island, Taiwan, is facing increasing problems from extreme weather, like strong typhoons and heavy rains. __21__ climate change is making these events more frequent and intense. Looking back at 2025, we see that Typhoon Danas landed in Chiayi in July. This storm caused serious roof damage, power cuts, and huge farm losses across the southern regions, especially in Chiayi and Tainan. Later, in late July, heavy rains brought record rainfall, leading to widespread floods, sadly including deaths and injuries, mainly in Yunlin, Chiayi, Tainan, Kaohsiung, and Pingtung, with some areas __22__ over 2000mm of rain. To minimize flood impact, some flood control strategies can be used. For instance, “gray” structures, like pumping stations and basins, are being built in some places to hold water for flood control. Besides, using “green” ideas to reduce flooding is another way. Specifically, building “Sponge City” __23__ roads soak up rainwater. Moreover, local people play an important part in flood control too. They lower water levels in their fish farms. In addition, special insurance offers financial support for losses driven by flooding. Unfortunately, __24__ these efforts, a very big disaster might still happen in the future and result in widespread damage. But when people get fully prepared, they will recover quickly even if that happens.

Medicare and Medicaid are two important programs that help older people with health care in the U.S. Medicare provides health care __25__ most Americans aged 65 or older. This federal program covers hospital and doctor services, but generally does not pay for long-term care, such as long nursing home stays or daily home health assistance. Many people find these gaps surprising and struggle with high personal costs. __26__, Medicare only pays for up to 100 days of skilled care in a nursing home after a hospital stay of at least three days. After 20 days, people must pay a daily share of costs. Given these limits, Medicaid serves as an important federal and state assistance program. It is significant for millions of low-income older adults and people with disabilities. For over 12 million individuals, __27__ by both Medicare and Medicaid, Medicaid makes Medicare more affordable by financing their insurance fees each month and small payments for care. This support also offers __28__ important services like long-term care in nursing homes and home care, allowing them to live safely in their communities. However, these home care services are not always offered and vary greatly by each state.

Today, AI tools help with many tasks, from email to planning. To get good results from Large Language Models (LLMs), we need to know how to speak to them. This skill is called prompt engineering. It means giving clear and useful directions so that the model can answer well. Think of yourself as a guide who leads the model toward helpful and correct results.

Many people follow simple steps for prompts that fit Google's best practices. You can remember five steps. First, set a clear task. You may assign a role and define the intended audience. Second, add enough context, such as relevant background information. Third, include examples or references if you have them. Fourth, add output limits or structure, like a list, table, or steps, so the answer stays on track. Fifth, check the result and improve it—review, revise, and try again.

Even with a strong prompt, LLMs can still make serious mistakes. At times they may speak with great confidence and give long answers that include names, dates, or numbers that do not exist. This risk is called hallucination. When it happens, the writing may look smooth and sound true, but the key facts are wrong.

To lower this risk, keep a human in the loop. Read the output with care. Check facts and fairness. If needed, ask the model to show sources or to explain the steps it used. If the answer has wrong facts, missing steps, or sentences that are not clear, change the prompt. Add needed details, cut extra words, or break the job into smaller steps. Then test again. By working in this way, we guide AI to meet real needs in a safe and useful way at school, at work, and beyond.

36. What is the main purpose of this passage?
    (A) To explain inner design of AI models and their training process details
    (B) To give the history of LLMs and famous research key events over time
    (C) To present the five steps for prompting and the need to review results for error
    (D) To claim AI can replace teachers and remove human review entirely forever

37. In paragraph 3, what does the word "hallucination" most likely mean?
    (A) A new feature that lets AI imagine creative stories for fun only
    (B) A convincing but inaccurate response with details that are not real
    (C) A tool inside AI that checks truth and improves the output quality
    (D) A short reply that skips details but still answers the question quickly

38. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the passage if you want to get good results while using AI models?
    (A) Add output limits or structure, then review and revise the results.
    (B) Include examples or references, and ask the model to cite sources.
    (C) Use images or charts to guide the model during generation every time.
    (D) Give a clear task and format, and add enough context for prompts.

Sean Baker is known for small crews, real locations, and a warm eye for people who live on the edge of big cities. In 2015, he made Tangerine with iPhones. The choice of using the cell phone was not a trick; it let him move fast, stay close to the street, and keep the budget low. The film's raw light, quick pace, and honest talk gave audiences a fresh look at daily life. Reviews praised its energy and the care he showed for his characters. That year marked the start of a path from an independent corner to the world stage.

In May 2017, his next film, The Florida Project, was shown at the Cannes Directors' Fortnight. The story follows a lively child and her young mother who live near a theme park and a wide road lined with bright signs and cheap hotels. The camera stays at the child's eye level, so common scenes such as a small store, a purple wall, and a tiny room feel new and full of color. Critics said the film was playful yet painful; many also called it a gentle but clear look at poverty and hope. Strong word of mouth pushed Baker into the center of film talk that year.

In July 2021, Red Rocket entered the main competition at Cannes. Set in a small town, it mixes humor with trouble and shows a man who goes back home and tries to begin again. The film proved that Baker could keep his simple style and still grow as a director. On March 2, 2025, he made history with Anora. He became the first person to win four Oscars for the same film, including Best Picture, Best Director, Best Film Editing, and Best Original Screenplay. From a phone to the biggest prize, Baker's steady work shows how clear vision and brave choices can guide a filmmaker across many years.

39. What is the main idea of this passage?
(A) How Sean Baker depicted life on the city's edges
(B) How Sean Baker first started filming with iPhones
(C) How Sean Baker created films focusing on children
(D) How Sean Baker rose from small films to global fame

40. Why did Sean Baker choose to film Tangerine with iPhones?
(A) To create a special effect that made it look like phone video all the way
(B) To save money and stay flexible while filming on real city streets
(C) To follow a new rule requiring digital filming for independent films
(D) To show that smartphones could completely replace regular cameras

41. What lesson can be learned from Sean Baker's career?
(A) Using large production crews is the best way to guarantee film quality.
(B) Relying on technology will eventually limit true creativity and expression.
(C) Making award-winning films is the dream of every single ambitious filmmaker.
(D) Having clear vision and making bold choices can lead to long-term success.

42. Based on the passage, arrange the following events in the order in which they happened.
①*The Florida Project* was presented at the Cannes Directors' Fortnight.
②*Anora* received the Oscars for both Best Picture and Best Director.
③*Red Rocket* was selected to compete in the main Cannes competition.
④*Tangerine* was entirely filmed using iPhones on real locations.
(A) ④→①→③→②
(B) ①→④→②→③
(C) ④→③→①→②
(D) ③→①→④→②
